

Navigating French capacity issues with confidence

When dealing with French private client law matters, questions of capacity can present unique challenges that require specialist expertise. At Ashtons Legal LLP, our French Legal Services Team understands the complexities involved and provides tailored solutions to overcome these obstacles.

When capacity issues affect French assets

Our experienced team regularly assists clients facing capacity-related issues in France, including situations where a person who owns French property subsequently loses capacity, cases involving minor children who inherit interests in French properties, and circumstances requiring the sale of French assets by attorneys acting under Property and Financial Affairs Lasting Power of Attorney or by Deputies.

Understanding the challenges

We recognise that beyond the initial language barriers, which can impose substantial challenges to progressing a case, the French legal system addresses capacity matters differently than would be the case in England and Wales. The assessment of whether a person lacks capacity to manage property and affairs depends significantly on the circumstances and the nature and extent of the assets involved. These complexities require specialist knowledge and experience to navigate effectively.

Why choose Ashtons?

Our French Legal Services team has extensive experience dealing with such cases and understands the difficulties that can arise. We have developed proven strategies to overcome these challenges and ensure successful outcomes for our clients. Whether you are dealing with capacity issues affecting French assets or need guidance on cross-border legal requirements, we provide comprehensive support throughout the process.
